PRICE TWO CENTS

FORGER DOES SOME QUICK WORK HERE

Two Fraudulent Checks Show Up Monday Afternoon When Deposited at a Local Bank.

EACH WAS DRAWN FOR $14.40

Restless Stranger Suddenly Disappears When Officer is Informed and Starts on Search.

Two forgeries committed on Saturday were brought to light Monday afternoon when the fraudulent checks were taken to the bank for deposit. Both checks were drawn for $14.40, one having been cashed at W. H. Reynolds' store and the other at Keach's store. The forgeries were drawn upon the checks of Mike Huber and Brother, the firm name having been forged at the bottom.

The man who committed the forgery was a stranger and succeeded in getting away before the officers could arrest him. It is known that he made several attempts to procure blank checks from several of the local firms about 7 o'clock Saturday evening, but his request was refused. During the evening he walked into the store of Thomas Clothing Company and asked for a couple of blank checks and was informed that the checks held by that firm had the firm imprint upon them and the man stated that he did not want checks which were thus printed. Later he secured two checks of an old series from Huber Brothers. Upon these checks appeared the firm name of Mike Huber and Brother.

The forgeries were not very good imitations of the signature of Mike F. Huber, whose initials appeared under the firm name. One of the checks was presented to W. H. Reynolds where the man purchased 2 pounds of coffee and asked that the difference be given him in cash. At the time the checks were cashed at both Reynolds' and Keach's stores the places were crowded with customers and the clerks were very busy filling orders. It appears that the man went from Reynolds' store to Keach's store where he again purchased 2 pounds of coffee and presented a similar check for $14.40. The difference was also given him in cash.

James E. Russell, who conducts a meat market opposite the interurban station, noticed the man walking back and forth in front of the interurban station for about half an hour between 7 and 8 o'clock and said that his attention was attracted by the stranger as he seemed to be unusually nervous and restless. The man kept watching the meat market and when Mr. Russell stepped out a few minutes the stranger walked into the shop and ordered 25 cents worth of meat and offered in payment a check for $18.65 signed by John M. Lewis. Just as the stranger handed the clerk the check Mr. Russell walked into the shop and motioned the clerk not to receive it. The stranger offered little objection when the check was refused and as Mr. Lewis was seen near his office, at the corner of Second street and Indianapolis avenue, Mr. Russell sent one of his clerks up to inquire of him

MANY ARE INJURED WHEN STAND FALLS

Big Platform at Marshall Notification Gives Way—Reported That Several Are Killed.

LOCAL MEN WERE ON STAND

Crash Came During Speech of Judge Alton B. Parker—Entire Structure Went Down.

(Special to Seymour Republican)

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 20.—During the Marshall notification exercises this afternoon the large grand stand fell with a terrible crash. The first reports state that several people were killed and hundreds of others are injured. The accident occurred at 3 o'clock during the address of Judge Alton B. Parker. The stand was a temporary frame work which had been erected especially for the notification exercises. It is feared that the number injured may run into the hundreds, as the stand was crowded with men, women and children, all of whom went down with the crash.

Judge Joseph Shea and Attorney General Thomas Honan, of Seymour, were on the platform at the time of the accident but are not among the first report of injured. O. O. Swails, E. P. Elsner, Albert Kasting and Charles Burkart of Seymour and Ross Robertson, of Brownstown, were directly in front of the stand when it fell. It is reported that the entire stand collapsed. On the stand were many persons of national and state prominence.

CHILD ACCIDENTALLY SHOT AND SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

Little Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hal McDonald Struck by 32-Caliber Bullet.

Little Katharine Doris, the fifteen months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hal McDonald, was quite seriously wounded late Monday afternoon at her home on South Chestnut street when she was shot by Maurice McDonald, who is boarding there. The little girl was sitting near the door and Mr. McDonald was on the other side of the room cleaning at 32-caliber revolver. The weapon was supposed to be a safety but in some unknown manner it was discharged and the copper jacket bullet was fired.

The bullet struck the little girl in the right hip. It came out about six inches below the point where it entered and re-entered her leg and again came out a short distance above the knee and buried itself in the frame of the screen door. The wounds are very painful and are somewhat serious because of the copper jacket which surrounded the bullet.

The condition of the little girl this afternoon is somewhat improved and it is believed that she will recover without serious effects. Had the bullet struck her about quarter of an inch higher it would have struck the joint and the injuries would have been much more serious.

J. A. YOTER NAMED BY REPUBLICANS

Brown County Veteran is Nominated for Senator From This District by Convention.

MUCH ENTHUSIASM IS SHOWN

Candidate is Well Known And Will Receive Large Vote—Popular Among The Veterans.

(Special to the Seymour Republican) Nashville, Ind., Aug. 20.—At the Republican senatorial convention of Jackson, Brown and Washington counties held at Nashville today, James A. Yoter, of Brown county, was nominated as candidate for senator. In spite of the inclement weather and the difficulty in reaching Nashville there was a good crowd present at the convention which was marked by a large amount of enthusiasm. The convention was called to order by Judge John M. Lewis, district chairman, and George Peter, of Seymour, was elected secretary. The name of Mr. Yoter was placed in nomination by the Brown county delegation and he was unanimously elected.

Mr. Yoter is a well known farmer residing about one and one half miles west of Nashville and is a veteran of the civil war. He has always been interested in welfare of the best interests of his community and he will receive a large vote from the residents of Brown county and especially from the veterans of the civil war.

After the speech of acceptance by Mr. Yoter enthusiastic speeches were

MORE DAMAGE DONE BY THE HEAVY WIND

Part of Roof of Store at Medora is Blown Off and Many Chimneys Are Laid Low.

TELEPHONE LINES ARE DOWN

Corn Fields in West Part of County Are Reported to Have Been Damaged by the Gale.

The storm damage which it is thought will amount to more than $1,000 was done by a heavy wind at Medora between 3 and 4 o'clock this morning. The storm seemed to be similar to a cyclone and it is reported that the windstorm seemed to dip down in several places and everything in its path was twisted and turned to destruction. The telephone line at Medora was disabled by the storm and it was impossible to find out the full extent of the damage. It is reported that fifteen telephone poles were blown down in the town of Medora and with a very few exceptions practically every 'phone in the place is out of order.

The storm occurred between 3 and 4 o'clock and while of short duration was terrific. Practically every chimney in the town which was not well braced was blown to pieces and the houses filled with soot, dust, mortar and brick.

The store of L. Ernst was badly damaged by the wind, a large part of the roof and the front brick wall having been blown down. The storm occurred shortly before the arrival of

ANNOUNCEMENT IS MADE OF PREMIUMS

Management of Boys' and Girls' Poultry Show Prepares Lists of Prizes Which Will Be Awarded.

SPECIAL MUSIC IS ARRANGED

Much Interest is Taken in the Exhibition Which Will Be Held at Consolidated School, August 31.

The management of the poultry show which will be given at the Consolidated school, August 31, has announced the premiums which will be given for the various entries. The cash premiums will be awarded on the ground. Where there is no competition the first ribbon and the second prize will be given. In case of ties the money will be divided equally.

Otis Crane of Purdue university, and H. L. Bridges will award the premiums, and the rules of the American Poultry Association will be followed. The contestants are requested to have the chickens, which will be entered in the contest, on the ground by 8:30 o'clock on the morning of the exhibition so that the various entries can be arranged.

Mr. Crane, who is a well known authority on the poultry question, will give an address at 10 o'clock and will give some practical demonstrations during the afternoon. Several other speakers have been engaged and will give lectures during the day.

Members of the Southern Indiana Poultry Association are invited to display their stock on the ground.

FRANKFORT BANKS LOST LARGE AMOUNT

Clever Forger Gets Away With Money, and Makes His Escape Without Leaving Clew.

SUM IS ESTIMATED AT $4,000

Believed That Man Had a Confederate Who Assisted in Covering Up The Tracks.

Frankfort, Ind., August 20.—While the police have practically no clew to the man who passed forged checks on the First and American National banks in this city yesterday, and obtained amounts variously estimated from $1,000 to $4,000, they are convinced that he had a confederate who either escaped with the money or used the automobile from Frankfort to Indianapolis.

After the forger cashed the checks he went to the Thurman garage, and before he hired the auto he was seen to be in earnest conversation with a man who stood near the building. This man left shortly after the forger entered the garage, and the police are not certain but that it was the forger himself who walked away and left the confederate to drive out of the city, thereby throwing the police off the track. Between the time the checks were cashed and the time the forger appeared at the garage he changed his blue serge suit and straw hat for a brown suit and striped cap. And that he was in no hurry to leave town was shown when he went to a barber shop and obtained a hair cut and shave, but where he changed his clothes is not known, as he was not registered at any hotel.

The police are of the opinion that the fellow was in town several days getting the lay of the land, because when he went to the First National Bank, where he posed as Oscar Carter, he spoke of being anxious to buy some land in the county, and said that land had been shown him by M. B. Fisher, a real estate agent. The bank officials knew that Fisher had been showing a man over the county and when the forger presented the check for $2,700 the bank officials say they gave him $500 on it, but it is street talk that the forger obtained $2,000. On his visit to the American National Bank the forger gave his name as O. C. Craig, and presented a check for $2,300 with the signature of Thomas Sims, a grain dealer. The bank hesitated in cashing the check and the man requested that Mr. Sims be called on the telephone. The bank got his son on the phone, but the son said he knew nothing about the check. The bank then called Mr. Sims' home, but he was out of the city. The forger was disappointed in not being able to get the money and finally the bank bank consented to cash the check, giving the forger, the officials say, $500, but it is persistently reported that $2,000 was the actual amount paid.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

THE OLD HORSE.

Old Bill is no beauty. He is knockkneed as you can see where he stands there, obedient to your will. Fifteen years ago his legs were as trim as a young thoroughbred's. They have sagged in your service. With pride in his going qualities, you drove him pell mell over hard roads. You let him stand by a hitching rack while you dallied. Stamping in summer at the flies and in winter to keep his blood in circulation, pounded over pavements—what wonder he is knockkneed?

His old head droops. Once he had a lordly neck, "clothed with thunder." You used the overcheck, causing a painful tension of the flexor muscles of the neck, hindering free respiration and circulation and causing quick fatigue. He can't hold up his head very long.

Bunches of gray hair on his back? Saddle galls made by your hard riding in his willingness to go your gait. When you hurried for the doctor or rode to catch up with the other fellows, you forgot about the blanket under the saddle.

Sweened also. You did that. The collar of a set of harness did not fit Bill's shoulders, and the hames of the plowing set were not properly adjusted. Sometimes when the season was dry and dusty Bill's shoulders were galled and sore. But he never complained.

His eyes are bad. You see, his normal vision, as of all horses, is more earthward than upward, but you reined his head up, causing eye strain. And then sometimes the harness had blinders and sometimes it had none. Dust and lack of sunshade helped. And when Bill got a cinder or dust in his eye he never spoke about it, and you failed to notice the fact. You see the animal simply couldn't wipe his eyes.

Blemishes? Plenty. Note the bumps and scars on old Bill's legs. There was a time when he interfered and you did not have him properly shod. In winter he was turned into a small field fenced with barb wire. On account of his high rein he sometimes stumbled on the hard road and bruised his legs. Some good in him yet?

Sure. You haven't quite killed him. Sometimes when his digestion is good and there is a level stretch of road he can go some. It is pathetic to note, though, how quickly he is played out. As he stands there, so you have made him. And in spite of your abuse he loves you and whinnies on your approach.

Take good care of old Bill! Else, sometime or somewhere, it may go hard with you.

BEef AND' IS REAL TEST

Bowery Character Explains to Sympathetic Judge How He Was Imposed Upon in Fifth Avenue.

New York.—The answer to the question, "When is a restaurant not a restaurant?" according to no less an authority than John Owens of Chatham Square and the Bowery, is, "When it does not serve beef and." "Beef and," in the language of Park Row and the lower East Side, invariably means a plate of corned beef and beans, the staple price of which in the fashionable refectories of that part of the city is 15 cents, although in less pretentious establishments it is served for a dime.

Mr. Owens is considered a man of parts in his own vicinage, where muscle rather than wealth gauges a man's standing. Yielding to the desire for a change of scene which comes to most persons at this vacation season, Mr. Owens a few evenings since wandered northward as far as Fifth avenue and Thirty-fourth street.

Just as he was passing the most gilded of the fashionable uptown hotels the pangs of hunger assailed him, and entering the restaurant, which was crowded with diners in evening dress, he ordered his favorite dish. The waiter's education evidently had been neglected, for he never heard of "beef and" and referred the worthy Mr. Owens to the menu, an appurtenance of dining with which that gentleman was wholly unfamiliar.

To John, however, it was inconceivable that any place called a restaurant should fail to provide the most staple of all dishes, and he proceeded to demand his rights, emphasizing his remarks by piling several waiters, tables and chairs in an impressive heap in the center of the room.

When he told the magistrate in the police court the following morning of the error that had led to his appearance in the dock the judge was sympathetic and explained that while a restaurant was a restaurant the world over it was only on the East Side that it was necessarily a beaenry.

WEARS STOCKINGS OF GOLD

Society Girl Startles Summer Colony at Bretton Woods—Are Valued at $100.

Bretton Woods, N. H.—Stockings of pure gold—the fashion vaguely announced from San Francisco—is a glittering fact in puritanical New England.

Miss Aline Gordon of New York, one of the fashionable young people at the Mt. Washington hotel, is the first to bring the alchemistic innovation to Bretton Woods, but the excitement and admiration which her golden stockings caused among the young and old point to a rapid spread of the new hosiery habit.

Thus far Miss Gordon has worn two pairs of the wonderful creations. The first appearance was at one of the weekly dances, when her descent of the main stairway was marked by a pedal glow that dazzled all the other guests. The second pair—which appeared at the following dance—were not only of golden texture, but were heavily brocaded with figures of a bird of paradise. It is said that gold stockings are considered a bargain at $100 a pair. You can wear one pair two times—if you are lucky.

RAIL HEAD WORKS IN MUD

W. C. Hurst of Bluff Railway Directs Laborers and None Know His Identity.

St. Louis, Mo.—Superintendent W. C. Hurst of the Bluff line passed three days in overalls and up to his shoe tops in mud with the crews, working to clear the track in the vicinity of Alton, and none of the big crew of workmen knew that the superintendent of the road was among them.

Mr. Hurst was in the ticket office with his rough clothes on when a young man came to the window and shouted:

"What's the name of the guy who is superintendent of this railroad?"

"W. C. Hurst," answered the official, and the young man wrote the name on an envelope and went on to mail a letter, probably asking for a position from the very man to whom he shouted.

Unable to Use Hands, Ephie Gladys Virtue Employs Uniq. Method to Operate Typewriter.

St. Paul.—Ephie Gladys Virtue, a crippled young woman of this city, has just completed writing a book. The book is a novel and contains 175 pages. The fact that she has written the book is not so remarkable as is the manner in which she did the work. Miss Virtue has always been a cripple and never attended school. She does her writing entirely upon a typewriter, and with her toes. Holding a pencil between her toes, she strikes the typewriter keys, and it is said her work is remarkably rapid.

The War Fifty Years Ago

Bold Move Northward of the Confederate Forces In the Southwest—With Chattanooga, Tenn., as a Starting Point, General Braxton Bragg Directs a March Into East and Middle Tennessee—Federals Under General Don Carlos Buell Are Forced to Retrace Their Steps From Alabama, Northward, Toward Nashville and the Kentucky Border—Confederate Cavalry Raiders Harass the Federal Military Operations.

By Captain GEO. L. KILMER, Late U. S. V.

At this time fifty years ago the Confederate armies in the west were foot loose and bent upon a gigantic military enterprise which was to tax all the energy and resources of the Federals opposed to them. In east Tennessee the south maintained a separate army; another had freshly gathered at Chattanooga, Tenn., and a third was at Tupelo, Miss. The Federals were in strongest force at Corinth, Miss., with one heavy detachment strung along the route between Corinth and Chattanooga.

General Braxton Bragg commanded the whole Confederate force in the west. In midsummer he headed his battalions toward the Kentucky border. His starting point was Chattanooga, on the southern border of Tennessee. To checkmate the movement by Bragg a force of Federals under General D. C. Buell set out from Huntsville, Ala., and marched north toward Nashville. Buell's army supplies were forwarded from Louisville through Nashville. This line was over 300 miles long and a difficult route for the Federals to guard. The Confederates were quick to seize the chance of ferried to harass General Buell's northward march.

Confederate Cavalry Raids.

To mislead the enemy Bragg sent Colonel Joseph Wheeler with a brigade of cavalry into west Tennessee and Brigadier General Frank C. Armstrong with a like force into north Alabama. Wheeler's operations in west Tennessee may be briefly summarized as a rapid march from Holly Springs, Miss., to Bolivar, Tenn.; an attack upon the outposts at that place, the destruction of bridges on the line of communications of the troops at Bolivar and Jackson, a number of slight affairs with the enemy's cavalry and the burning of a quantity of cotton in transit to the north. One week was thus occupied behind the enemy's lines, the main object of the movement being to create the impression of a general advance.

Meanwhile General N. B. Forrest and General John H. Morgan were raiding Buell's communications far to the north. Forrest was at McMinville, southeast of Nashville. From this point he made repeated raids on the line of road south of Nashville, leaving Morgan to operate against the Louisville and Nashville railroad. These raiders were able to move almost without opposition, as Buell was without sufficient cavalry to cope with them. The latter had been compelled to divide his cavalry into small detachments to run down the raiding bands that had been operating on his line of railroad. Now that Forrest's and Morgan's command had become so formidable he was compelled to Johnson sought to attack Morgan before the latter could unite with Forrest, who was in the neighborhood at that time. But Morgan, hearing that Johnson had infantry and artillery supports, tried to avoid combat.

Maneuvers at Cumberland Gap.

On Aug. 16 Buell ordered General William Nelson to assume command in Kentucky and to make such dispositions of his troops as would resist any movement by Kirby Smith, then threatening Cumberland Gap from east Tennessee.

On the same day that Nelson's orders were dated General C. L. Stevenson appeared with his Confederate division before Cumberland Gap. General George W. Morgan, in command there, immediately sent out cavalry to the adjoining gaps to watch for further movements of the Confederates. When a short distance from Roger's Gap the cavalry struck the head of Kirby Smith's army on its advance to Kentucky. Smith's forces were those of his own command in east Tennessee, reinforced by the divisions of McCown from Mississippi, sent him by Bragg, and also the two fine brigades of Cleburne and Preston Smith ordered to report to him from Chattanooga.

Kirby Smith moved with his main command to Barbourville and ordered McCown to Cumberland Ford with a large force, which cut off Morgan in the gap from his base of supplies in that direction. Leaving Stevenson in Morgan's front to engage his attention, Kirby Smith with his entire force advanced into Kentucky, thus entirely cutting off re-enforcements and supplies to Morgan's command.

The plight of Morgan was disastrous. Only two months before he had with marvelous energy forced his way over mountains to reach the gap and, if possible, drive away the Confederate force which was guarding it. That force was the same which now, under the same commander, Stevenson, threatened to oust him in turn. When Morgan set out for the gap in May, 1862, the Federal troops under Buell were marching toward Chattanooga, Tenn., on the Georgia border. General O. M. Mitchell's division was in actual contact with the outposts of the Confederate troops which were guarding the town.

General Morgan had hastened his march as much as possible, so that he might appear before Cumberland Gap while Mitchell was threatening Chattanooga. But at times the obstacles placed in the path of the Federals were almost insurmountable. So steep were the climbs for his troops that often 200 men were barely able to drag a single cannon. It was a forlorn hope enterprise all through. With the wilderness overcome, the guns and troops on the ground, the next organize his cavalry into united bodies for better defensive movements against these raiders.

The Second Indiana, Fourth and Fifth Kentucky and Seventh Pennsylvania cavalry regiments he formed into one brigade, and on Aug. 11 he sent it under General R. W. Johnson against John Morgan, who had been ordered by Bragg to break the railroad between Louisville and Nashville, in order to retard Buell's movement north to Louisville as much as possible, and who was operating about Gallatin, Tenn., which he captured with 200 prisoners. Colonel Boone was in command of the Federal forces at this point.

Morgan, hearing that Boone slept in the town away from the camp, sent a small force to capture him, which was done just as he had dressed and was starting to camp. Morgan then destroyed a railroad-bridge south of Gallatin and the tunnel six miles north, the roof of which was supported with large beams on upright timbers. Running some freight cars into the tunnel, they were set on fire and some 800 feet of it destroyed, the roof caving in.

thing was to haul up food to fight on and ammunition to fight with. In fact, Stevenson waited at a safe distance for his foe to get tired. He had evacuated the works, but still clung to the scheme of making Cumberland Gap a Confederate defense of east Tennessee.

Bold Plan of the Confederates.

As soon as Buell's designs upon east Tennessee were known the Confederate authorities took prompt measures to counteract them. It was at first in contemplation to move Bragg's army upon Buell's rear in middle Tennessee. The nucleus of a force under General Earl Van Dorn and General Sterling Price was left in Mississippi to neutralize Grant's force on the Memphis and Charleston road.

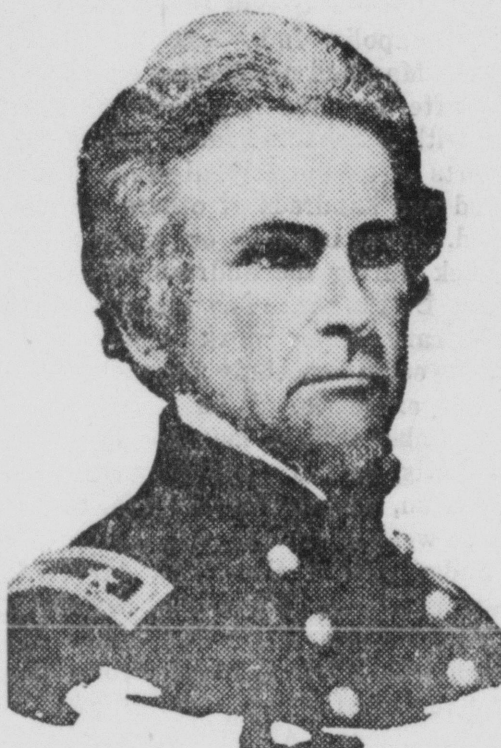

The foreshadowing of an aggressive Confederate campaign from east Tennessee soon began to be seen. By report and actually, as the record shows, the Confederate objective was at first middle Tennessee and Nashville. Rumor, as usual, placed Bragg's force that was ready for the work at very large numbers—$0,000 or 100,000 men. Buell realized that the enemy in his front was assuming formidable proportions, but did not doubt that Bragg's strength was overestimated nor that, if necessary, his own force would be increased.

On the 7th of August Buell had informed General Halleck, the general in chief, of the condition which the campaign was assuming and told him that his force should be increased. He estimated the force opposed at 60,000 men. Halleck answered on the 8th that General Grant would turn over two divisions to Buell "if he absolutely required them." By the 12th the accumulating evidence showed that the call could not be dispensed with, and Buell requested Grant to forward the divisions without delay. One of them joined on the 1st of September. The other did not arrive until the 12th, after the movement northward to follow Bragg had commenced.

Federal Lack of Cavalry.

Federal communications south of the Cumberland had been made secure by the distribution of the troops, but to the north the depredations were prosecuted with increased vigor. The cavalry was totally insufficient to cope with these incursions, which, it must be said, also, were seldom resisted by the infantry guards with vigilance and resolution. On the 12th of August Morgan appeared on the railroad north of Nashville and destroyed several important bridges. Buell's communication with Louisville, on which he was dependent for supplies, was thus for the time effectually severed.

Work was immediately commenced to repair the damage, but the constantly recurring presence of Morgan's cavalry interfered so effectually as to require a large increase of force from the front or the rear for the defense. Buell had already strengthened the guards at Bowling Green and Munfordsville. On the 16th he gave General William Nelson a couple of field batteries and some experienced cavalry and infantry officers to re-establish communications and operate against John Morgan's incursions.

On the 18th a guard of a regiment belonging to Grant's command was captured without a show of resistance at Clarksville, Tenn., where a considerable quantity of supplies had been deposited for transshipment in consequence of the suspension of navigation by low water in the Cumberland.

Invasion of Kentucky.

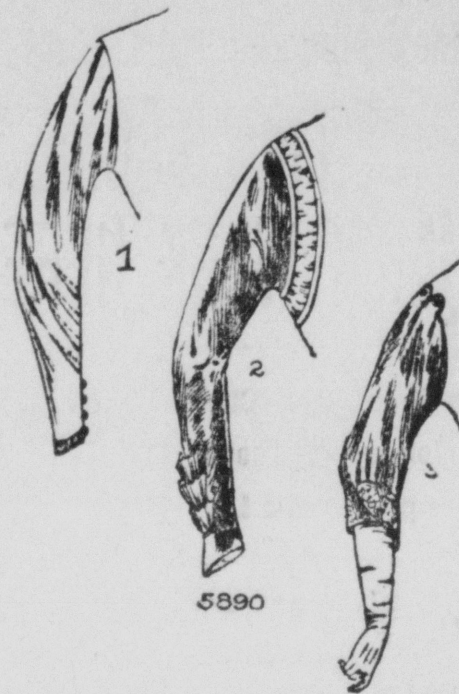

The original plan was for a combined movement into middle Tennessee for the recovery of Nashville. The invasion of Kentucky was at first probably not thought of at all or at least only as a later possibility. But as Bragg could not be ready to cross the Tennessee river from Chattanooga until about the middle of August it was arranged that in the meantime Kirby Smith, with his troops already in east Tennessee, should attack and capture Morgan at Cumberland Gap. The strength of Morgan's fortified position, however, with 8,000 good troops to defend it, was upon consideration deemed to preclude the attempt. The alternative was to invest him on the south side with 9,000 men under Stevenson, while Smith with 12,000 should seize and hold his communication on the north, by which means, not being strong enough to break his way out on either side, Morgan, upon the exhaustion of his supplies, would be compelled to surrender. This plan being adopted, Smith commenced his movement through Roger's and Big Creek gaps on the 14th of August and reached Morgan's rear at Barbourville on the 18th.

He now perceived that it would be impossible for him to gather supplies for his command from that poor and exhausted region, and later his embarrassment was increased by Morgan's occupation of Roger's and Big Creek gaps. Nothing therefore remained for him but to withdraw or advance boldly into the rich portion of Kentucky. Bragg was not at first in favor of the latter course until he should be prepared to follow up the precipitate movement which it was not doubted Buell would make from middle Tennessee for the protection of Kentucky. However, his concurrence was readily yielded, for the proposition was alluring.

The idea of invasion, which had now taken firm root, was coupled with the chimera of an uprising of the people and a transfer of the state to the Confederacy. Buell never had the slightest apprehension of such a result. Boys might join John Morgan's roving cavaliers and some mature men might tamely themselves with less romance to the cause of the Confederacy, and these phenomena would of course be multiplied by the backing of an arm

SHE GAVE UP ALL HOPE

Physicians Failed To Help Mrs. Green, But She Finally Found Relief in Cardui.

Meeteet, Va.—Mrs. J. C. Green of this place says: "I suffered with womanly troubles so that I could hardly sit up. Two of the best doctors in our town treated me, and I tried different medicines, until I gave up all hope of ever getting well."

One day, I decided to try some Cardui. It did so much for me that I ordered some more, and it cured me! Today, I feel as well as I ever did in my life.

The pains and the trouble are all gone. I feel like another person in every way. I wish every sufferer could know what Cardui will do for sick women."

A few doses of Cardui at the right time, will save many a big doctor bill, by preventing serious sickness.

It tones up the nervous system, and helps make pale cheeks fresh and rosy. Thousands of weak women have been restored to health and happiness by using Cardui. Suppose you try it. It may be just the medicine you need.

DR. SUN VICTIM OF AN ASSASSIN

China's Liberator Falls Before Base Ingratitude.

Meager Reports From China Indicate That Country Again Is on Verge of Revolution Following Reign of Drum-head Executions and Assassinations in Which Even the Man Who Gave the Republic to Yuan Falls.

San Francisco, Aug. 20.—Receipt of cable news that Dr. Sun Yat Sen had been assassinated soon after he set out from Shanghai for Peking, has greatly excited the Young China association of San Francisco. The association at once communicated with the Chinese minister in Washington and received a telegram that he as well as the state department had received similar messages that Sun was dead. The message from the Chinese minister said that the state department had vainly spent several hours trying to confirm the cable. One of the officers of the Young China association said: "When we read that Dr. Sun Yat Sen had left Shanghai to go to Peking to allay the excitement caused by the execution of Chang Chen Wu, we feared for his safety. We knew when he set out that he took his life in his hands. Our cable from Shanghai said that he left without the usual guard.

"If he was assassinated the crime may be traced to Yuan Shih Kai, who is jealous of the ascendancy of Sun and would like to see him out of the way."

Sun Yat Sen was the prime organizer of the successive revolutions which put an end to the Manchu rule in the Chinese empire. He was the provisional president of the newly formed republic, held the control of it for six weeks, and then sent word to Yuan Shih Kai to come to Nankin and be elected regularly the president of the republic of China. From all that has come to the western world, Dr. Sun's relinquishment of the chief place in the new government was voluntary. He acted apparently with the intention of winning the respect of the world for the new republic, thinking that a man branded in all the capitals as a revolutionist should not be the chief beneficiary of the overthrow of the ancient rule.

Dr. Sun's career and the use which he made of the days of his greatest power, were a surprise to those who followed the intricate affairs of China in the last two decades. He was regarded as an outcast, an anarchist working behind screens. When at last the republic was proclaimed and the formal abdication of the little Manchu emperor was accomplished, the world set to work to reconstruct its opinion of the man at whose door the final revolution was laid.

The fact that Dr. Sun worked so silently through most of his years makes the details of his early life matters of conjecture. One fragmentary narrative says that he was born in Hawaii, the son of a wealthy merchant in the islands. More trustworthy authorities have it that he was born in Hong-Shan, a town of Kwang-tung province in southern China. Whatever the truth may be about his birthplace, it is established that when he was a young man he was studying medicine under the guidance of an English physician in Hong Kong. Thence he went to England and after study in a preparatory school was graduated from a medical college and returned to China. When Dr. Sun returned to China after his medical studies in England, he practiced the new medicine, despite the violent prejudice with which the science was met in the empire. He practiced in Macao, Hong Kong and Canton.

Dr. Sun's revolutionary activities began at least eighteen years ago, when he was twenty-five years old. Just where he began and to whom he first suggested that Chinamen should rule themselves, none but his closest friends know. His first methods, it appears, were peaceful.

He hoped that the principles of self-government could be worked into the Chinese system without bloodshed. He therefore set to work to break through the conservatism which shielded the Manchu masters. He organized clubs of advanced thinkers among the young Chinese of the south. It was not long that Dr. Sun was able to keep his activities within the bounds of peace. His first revolution, that of 1896, was a pitiful failure. It centered in Canton, where the rule was obnoxious to the young men of Dr. Sun's following. Word of the failure of the uprising was whispered to Dr. Sun in time to allow him to leave the country. He caught a steamer for the United States and escaped. A price had been upon his head from the moment that his complicity in the Canton revolution had been assured, and Chinese agents were searching for him everywhere.

Operating in this country and in Europe, Dr. Sun quietly strengthened his forces until, conditions being considered ripe for successful revolution less than a year ago, he returned to China and took charge of the revolt which resulted in the overthrow of the Manchu rule and the creation of a republic. For several weeks cables from China indicated a growing breach between Sun Yat Sen and Yuan Shih Kai, president of the republic, whom Dr. Sun himself placed in that position. Dr. Sun said that Yuan Shih Kai must be deposed from the presidency before he succeeded in establishing a dictatorship. Yuan, on the other hand, says that high party feeling in China at this juncture in its affairs means chaos and perhaps the end of the Chinese republic. The execution of the two generals a few days ago was justified by President Yuan on the score that they were hatching a revolution.

YUAN CALLED ON TO MAKE EXPLANATION

If Not Satisfactory He Will Be Impeached.

Peking, Aug. 20.—Dealing with the executions of Generals Chang Tien Chu and Feng Wei, the assembly sidetracked all business yesterday. Thirty members of the assembly presented a memorial demanding an immediate investigation of the killing and the punishment of those responsible for the execution of the two officers, failing which the chamber should dissolve and refuse further association with the government. President Yuan Shih Kai was given three days in which to explain. If the reply is not satisfactory the president will be summoned before the assembly to explain himself. If his explanation is still unsatisfactory he will be impeached.

The best informed Chinese here say there is small doubt of an early clash between the northern forces and the southern. Rich Chinese from up-country are again rushing into foreign Shanghai with all their portable possessions for safety under the guns of the international war fleet. Yuan is much alarmed. The generals he killed were invited by him to come into Peking from up-country to talk politics with him. Though they suspected he was trying to establish a dictatorship, they trusted to his safe conduct for personal safety. After entertaining, he arrested them, had General Cheng and another shot and sent the others to Hankow to be executed. Vice President Li Yuan Hung is in charge at Hankow and may not have carried out the orders.

Before he left for Peking to demand an accounting from President Yuan Shih Kai for the shooting of his friend, General Cheng Tsen Chu, and other republican army officers, Dr. Sun Yat Sen left orders for an immediate mobilization of the military forces in southern China to be used against the president if his explanation should prove unsatisfactory. The doctor's agents are rushing this work and within a week, slowly as things generally move in China, indications are that 200,000 or 300,000 revolutionary veterans will be under arms.

A bulletin in regard to the condition of General Booth shows his condition to be less satisfactory.

MAY YET GET AT THE BASIC FACTS

Senate Interested In the Penrose-Roosevelt Feud.

CALL FOR ORIGINAL LETTERS

Republican Senator Has Telegraphed to Arthur Brisbane For Original Copies of Archbold Letters Showing Alleged Payments to Senator Penrose in Connection With Memorable Campaign of 1904.

Washington, Aug. 20.—In the Penrose-Standard Oil campaign contribution case there are further interesting developments. Senator Penrose's friends are saying that not only the $25,000 contribution by John D. Archbold was used in the interests of Theodore Roosevelt's candidacy for reelection, but that Senator Penrose raised all told $700,000 for use in promoting the Republican cause, including the election of Colonel Roosevelt, in Pennsylvania in 1904.

It is learned that a Republican senator has telegraphed to Arthur Brisbane, asking for the original copies of the John D. Archbold letters showing payments to Senator Penrose. Apparently certain senators desire to investigate the matter with a view to moving for an official inquiry.

Senator Penrose himself, however, has indicated that it probably will not become necessary for any senators to urge him in making disclosures in regard to these Standard Oil payments. It is believed here that Mr. Penrose will either take the floor of the senate and make a speech, or ask to be called as a witness before the senate committee which is now investigating the campaign contributions of 1904 and 1908. Senator Penrose has returned to Washington and will hold conferences with several of his friends and will determine upon a course of action.

The news that Senator Penrose raised $700,000 to carry Pennsylvania in 1904 was received with great interest here. Benjamin B. Odell has testified that $500,000 was contributed by the national committee alone for expenditure in New York state and that he raised $200,000 in addition to the funds from the national committee. These figures indicate that it cost the Republicans in 1904 a total of $1,400,000 in these two states alone.

While Senator Penrose is engaging Colonel Roosevelt's attention, Senator La Follette is preparing to reiterate with decidedly more emphasis his demand that Colonel Roosevelt disclose the contributions to his primary campaign. Senator La Follette will renew this demand upon the colonel in the forthcoming issue of his magazine.

LATEST MOVEMENT IN PANAMA CANAL BILL

President Urges Congress to Respect Treaty.

Washington, Aug. 20.—A special message on the Panama bill has been sent to congress by President Taft. He urges the passage by congress of a joint resolution which will make it apparent before the world that the United States had no intention of violating the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. This resolution, in the president's opinion, should take the form of a declaration that the present legislation will not supersede any treaty rights conferred by the Hay-Pauncefote convention. The president would leave it to the United States supreme court to construe the treaty and determine whether or not the granting of free tolls to American ships in the coast-wise trade constituted a violation of it.

The free tolls provision is the only objection that the president cites to the bill as it has been laid before him. The Democratic leaders of the house will refuse a resolution such as the president suggests, and his effort along this line will undoubtedly fail.

What the president will do when congress turns down his joint resolution has not been definitely settled.

The United States navy will get only one battleship from congress at this session. The conference report on the naval appropriation bill providing one battleship to cost $15,000,000 and eight submarines was accepted by the senate, that body receding from its amendment providing for two battleships.

FIGHT RENEWED

Congress Determined to Abolish Commerce Court.

Washington, Aug. 20.—The senate repassed the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill which was vetoed by President Taft. The bill contains a provision abolishing the commerce court, but the clause limiting the tenure of office of government clerks to seven years was eliminated in the house committee. It was because of these two provisions that President Taft failed to sign the measure. The provision appropriating $100,000 for the extension of the foreign trade of the government has also been omitted from the bill.

The measure passed by the senate is the identical one to the legislative bill which was enacted by the house last Saturday night. For this reason a conference will not be necessary, and the measure goes direct to the president for the second time. Mr. Taft will again veto the bill and an attempt will be made in both houses to abolish the commerce court over his veto.

THE NOMINEE IS DULY NOTIFIED

Judge Parker Breaks News to Governor Marshall.

LARGE CROWD WAS PRESENT

Pretty University Park in Indianapolis Overflowed With Admiring Hoosiers Who Had Gathered There to Hear the Chief Executive of Their State Notified of the Honor Which Came to Him at Baltimore Convention.

Indianapolis, Aug. 20.—Governor Thomas R. Marshall this afternoon, in the presence of a large crowd of admiring fellow Hoosiers and a goodly delegation of prominent Democrats representing all parts of the country, was notified of his nomination as vice presidential candidate of the Democratic party.

The notification ceremonies were conducted from a large platform erected in front of the Indiana Democratic club house overlooking University park, in the central portion of the city, the park overflowing with the crowd that had assembled for the occasion. The downtown section of the city was profusely decorated for the event, thousands of Wilson and Marshall pictures and banners contributing to the decorative features.

The meeting was called to order by Thomas Taggart, national committee man for Indiana, who introduced Judge Alton B. Parker of New York, Democracy's candidate for president in 1904, who, as chairman of the notification committee appointed by the Baltimore convention, made the address informing Governor Marshall of the honor conferred upon him. When the applause following this announcement had subsided, the nominee responded at length, departing but few times from the terms of his set address. Governor Marshall was listened to with the closest attention and was given a rousing demonstration at the close of his address.

At the close of the meeting the visitors were taken in automobiles for a ride about town and stopped at the home of Governor Marshall, in North Pennsylvania street, where a reception was held.

INDIANA LEADS

Fine Commendation of the Work of State Health Board.

Indianapolis, Aug. 20.—Charles H. Keyes, president of the National Educational Council of New York, spoke in commendatory terms of the work of the Indiana state board of health and of its secretary, Dr. J. N. Hurty, in an address at the opening session of the Marion County Teachers institute.

"One of the most important branches of educational work, and one to which educators all over the country are beginning to pay more and more attention, is that of the health of the school children," he said. "And whenever the question of health and hygiene is being discussed, your Hoosier state is looked up to as a model, because it has become to be known all over the land as a state which looks after the general health of its people."

Throughout his travels over the country in which he has spoken in many of the large cities, Mr. Keyes said that he had always heard praise spoken for the Indiana state health department, and especially of the work accomplished by Dr. Hurty.

DIDN'T GET FAR

Bold Bandit Held Up Four Men but Was Soon Arrested.

Covington, Ind., Aug. 20.—A highwayman entered the Big Four station here and at the muzzle of a revolver compelled the ticket agent to hand over what money there was in the cash drawer. In the waiting room were three passengers waiting for a train. These the robber marched into the ticket office and relieved them of their money, getting in all something over $50. The bandit then fired a shot in the waiting room and ran out a side door. The alarm was given and police found him asleep under a tree just west of the city. He gave his name as Hubert Howard.

The Deadly Coal Oil Can.

Alamo, Ind., Aug. 20.—Mrs. Homer Myers, aged twenty-three, was burned to death at her home when the coal oil can with which she was attempting to hasten the kitchen fire, exploded, showering her with blazing oil. Although her husband made heroic efforts to extinguish the flames, she was so badly burned that death soon resulted. She left a baby one month old.

A Stirring Up at Jasonville.

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 20.—Following the arrest at Jasonville of three girls, all under seventeen years of age, on a charge of delinquency, they made affidavits on which warrants were issued for the arrest of thirty-eight Jasonville men, some of whom are prominent citizens and who have families.

Three hundred and fifty officers and enlisted men of the Indiana national guard have reported at Fort Benjamin Harrison for the annual state and regimental shoot.

S. M. SCHEPPS

Object of Controversy Between Police and District Attorney.

FORCED DETECTIVES TO BACK RIGHT DOWN

Whitman Protected Schepps
From Police.

New York, Aug. 20.—On the way from Albany to this city Sam Schepps confessed to District Attorney Whitman that he and Jack Rose paid the murderers of Herman Rosenthal with Lieutenant Becker's money, and that he had been the messenger between Becker and Rose while Rose was in hiding.

As soon as the train bearing Mr. Whitman and Schepps got here detectives acting under orders from Commissioner Waldo and Second Deputy Dougherty to deliver Schepps at police headquarters, made two attempts to take the informer away from the district attorney. Mr. Whitman warned the detectives that if they laid a finger on Schepps they would be arrested for oppression.

They backed down and reported to Commissioner Waldo, who rescinded the order. But by that time the informer had been rushed by Whitman's men to the West Side court, arraigned for vagrancy and held for one week—long enough for the district attorney's purpose to work out.

The efforts to snatch Schepps from the district attorney forced the first open clash between the police department and the county prosecutor. Trouble has been simmering for weeks. Finally it boiled over. The district attorney charges that the police wanted to intimidate Schepps before permitting him to talk about the murder of Rosenthal or the blackmailing operations of policemen.

Found Bankers "Easy."

Frankfort, Ind., Aug. 20.—A swindler worked the banks here for $1,000 in cash by means of forged checks and made his escape. At the First National bank the man opened an account with forged checks for $2,700. He then drew $500 from the bank and went to the American National bank, where he deposited checks for $2,300, bearing forged signatures. He obtained $500 from this bank. The man is about twenty years old.

An Investigation in Order.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Secretary of the Interior Fisher will leave Washington Sunday for Honolulu to conduct an investigation of the administration of Governor Freer of the Hawaiian Islands. He will return to Washington about Oct. 15.

Republicans in most counties of this state are declining to leave their party to join in the nomination of local Bull Moose tickets. This is plainly the wise and rational course to follow. Ed Lee, whose revengeful purpose is well known, urges the naming of third party tickets in all counties. The Republicans and taxpayers of the state will not be misled by his selfish counsel. In this county the Republican party has grown to be an influential factor in shaping public affairs, and its strength and watchfulness require the Democratic party to exercise care in the selection of candidates and to respect the wishes of the people in the administration of affairs. A Bull Moose convention has been called to meet in this county, but thinking Republicans will not aid in nominating a county ticket under that emblem. Certain democratic politicians will encourage this movement, in the hope of effectively destroying the Republican organization, so that they may control without question County and City affairs. If this convention is controlled by the best of the Roosevelt element it will meet and adjourn without attempting to put up a county ticket.

Although the Indianapolis Star comes out with screaming headlines when any person, for any reason, announces he will affiliate with the third party, it overlooks the fact that all but three of the Republican United States senators, and with one exception all of seven governors who boomed Roosevelt for the presidential candidacy during the early part of the campaign, will take no part in new organization, and are still supporting the principles of the Republican party. It is through the Republican party that the country has made its greatest progress, and there will be a very small per cent. of the American voters who will vote for the new organization which will appear under a separate emblem upon the ballot.

The question of good roads in Jackson county is receiving more attention than has been given it for some time and it is commendable that the subject is accorded the prominence it merits. Good roads experts tell us that one of the principal features of road building is proper drainage and there are many highways in the county which could be greatly bettered and improved by opening the ditches along the sides. Doubtless many of the roads in this vicinity could be made much better by following the suggestion, and it would be much less expensive than rebuilding them.

Governor Marshall was notified today that the Democrats has selected him as candidate for vice president. No doubt the news will be broke gently as the surprise will be more than he can stand.

Heard Them Sing.

Jean Smith, Randall Harlan, Leo
Osman and Bert Swartz, a local quartette of singers, journeyed to Seymour Saturday night and returned to this city on train 1 Sunday afternoon.
Owing to the wreck at Green Springs, the train was several hours late and to while away the time the boys made use of their vocal chords.

William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska, was a passenger on the train, and hearing the boys singing came to them and asked them to sing several selections, which they readily did.
Mr. Bryan expressed himself as more than pleased with the music and congratulated the young men on their fine voices.—Washington Herald.

the early east bound passenger train, and as soon as it pulled into the station the passengers for Medora assisted in saving the stock at the store by moving all of it to the rear of the building so that it would not be damaged by the water and rain. Outside of the damage to the building Mr.
Ernst does not believe that the loss will be heavy, as practically all of the stock was saved. The chimneys on the homes of Robert Hinderleider and Mrs. Ocie Guthrie were blown down and some damage was done at both places by the soot and dust.

A large number of trees were laid low by the heavy gale, and a farmer living near Medora stated that in about two miles he counted five large trees lying on the ground. It is also reported that many corn fields were practically ruined by the heavy wind as the stalks were broken close to the ground.

It was reported here this morning that considerable damage had been done in the vicinity of Freetown, but a telephone message from that place this afternoon stated that the principal damage was done to the corn fields and that the damage to property was slight.

The rain seems to have been general in Southern Indiana and will be helpful to the corn crop. The local weather observer reports a rainfall of about one inch and a half in this city.

On Police Force.

George Wolfe has been appointed as policeman and will serve during the day with Chief of Police J. T. Abell.
For a while Officer Wolfe's special duty will be to enforce the ordinance regarding the cutting of weeds and the trimming of trees, and has already given orders to a number of people. Chief Abell says that he has given a number of property owners instructions about the ordinance, but they have failed to comply with the orders and that it may be necessary to prosecute them.

Mrs. Charles Dahlenburg Dead.

Mrs. Charles Dahlenburg, who had been ill for some time at her home at Shieldstown, died about three o'clock this afternoon. She is survived by her husband and several children.

CLASSES ARE CONDUCTED AT THE SHIELDS HIGH SCHOOL

Itinerant School Convenes With Large Attendance—Special Sermon
Tonight.

The first class of the itinerant school, which is being conducted under the auspices of the Indiana conference of the M. E. church, was called to order this morning at the high school, and the school will continue until Friday. About sixty-five young ministers are here to attend the school on instructions. The classes are held each hour during the day from 8 o'clock until 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Chapel services are conducted from 7:30 until 8 o'clock in the assembly room of the high school.

Each night during the week special services will be conducted at the First M. E. church, and this evening the address will be given by the Rev. Bert Beck, pastor of the Locust St. M. E. church at Greencastle. The Rev.
Beck is regarded as one of the most brilliant thinkers and most pleasing speakers in the Indiana conference, and his sermon tonight will be heard by a large audience. His subject:
"Methodism and the Amusement Question," is of unusual interest as it has been given considerable attention by the church generally. Much time was given to the discussion of the amusement question at the last meeting of the conference.

The cabinet of the Indiana conference will meet tomorrow and will be attended by the district superintendents, who will be the guests of Dr. F.
A. Steele, superintendent of the Seymour district. This meeting has been called by Bishop Charles W. Smith and several matters pertaining to church work in this district will be taken up at the meeting.

PRETTY SUMMER SILKS

About the most practical of summer gowns are those simple affairs made of light-weight silks in colors neither very dark nor very light. Foulards, messalines, chiffons, taffetas and the less expensive crepes are mainly chosen for these, and their success (beside the beauty of the fabrics) lies in good color combinations and in design. The changeable taffetas of the present season have inspired designers to many pretty and very effective new ideas. These designers have had in mind all types of figures; designing for the slim ones gowns calculated to make them look not too straight, and for the plump ones lines tended to lengthen curves and lend grace. Either style or any style will look well on a figure possessed of the right proportions. That is, one that is neither too thin or too fat.

Another advantage of these unpretentious silk gowns is that two silks are so often combined in making them that short lengths may be used. And for the clever and economical lady who would evolve a new gown out of two old ones any number of good designs are offered in combinations of two fabrics, which she may model after.

Two examples are shown here of models that are easy to make and pleasing to look at. A changeable chiffon taffeta (as brown, blue or green, shot with black) has an applique of heavy ecru lace and pipings of black satin. Little buttons of black satin and a narrow girdle of the same add a telling finish. For the touches of black are most effective.

This model is designed for a slender figure and is made so that it may be worn with a chemisette and collar of lace. There is a small applique of silk passementerie of gold, black and the color of the gown.

The second model which has been developed in blue and white or black and white. The little coatee is of a plain foulard in the color of the body of the gown, with cuffs to match. Little oblong covered buttons in the plain fabric and pipings of the figured material make a pretty finish. The tie is a vivid green, but black might be used instead. Lace undersleeves and a chemisette are worn with this model and its straight lines and plain skirt recommend it to the stout figure.

FROCKS FOR LITTLE GIRL

Simple Styles That Are Always in Favor and That Would Be Unwise to Change.

In children's frocks nowadays style is quite as important as it is in regard to grown-up garments. For a long time there has been comparatively little difference in the outline of clothes for young girls, grown girls and their still girlish mothers, but perhaps this is to no small extent due to the fact that grown-up lines have been simple enough for children to adopt.

No doubt if our dressmakers succeed in forcing upon us panniers and draperies, general good taste will prevent our defying little girls' frocks to match, and we shall leave them still straight, slim and simple. Meantime the coat and skirt of simple make, with a plain front panel, large revers and collar and the inevitable sprinkling of buttons or a long Cossack frock or a pleated skirt and Magyar blouse are each regarded as in their proper place becoming to the school girl or even to the smaller child.

NEW STOCK COLLARS.

The new grandfather's stock is just another variation on the Robespierre neckwear which is now at the height of fashion. This collar of sheer hemstitched white linen turns over on a high stock of plaited black silk, and is trim and smart with tailored silk blouses for morning wear.

Renovate Crepe.

Skimmed milk and water, with a bit of glue in it, made scalding hot, is excellent to restore old rusty black crepe; if well squeezed and pulled dry like muslin, it will look as well as, or better, than new.

SOME HOME-MADE PRESENTS

Pretty Gifts That Are Far Superior to Those That May Be Purchased Anywhere.

Cretonne lamp shades with net laid over them.

Cake covers made of filet lace on a wire frame.

Some one of the numerous delectable little towels.

A collar and cuff set of fine linen well made and embroidered.

A pair of new gathered ribbon garters with a posy of satin roses.

A set of cretonne or linen crapes and cloth to match for her traveling cases.

Lingerie pillows of handkerchief linen, Cluny lace and a touch of embroidery.

A table cover in Monk's cloth with cross-stitch design all around the square.

Tea cloths and tea napkins with embroidered monograms and any individual touch.

A set of sachets of different size, not clumsy or overworked, but dainty and well fitted.

For the Pongee Costume.

The "natural-colored" girl is again with us, meaning the girl who goes in for a costume wholly in the shade of natural-colored lines or pongee. With her tailored suit or frock of either heavy linen or wash, she wears leather pumps and lisle hosiery of a matching hue, a linen petticoat bordered and banded with coarse unbleached linen lace, a suede belt with self-colored buckle and an outing hat of raffia or Panama draped with a natural-colored Shantung scarf. Finally, in one hand she carries a sunshade of Shantung and natural wood, and in the other a handbag of raffia. For country wear this sort of costume is exceedingly knowing-looking and it is a decided relief in a neighborhood where all-white or white and color get-ups prevail.

Boudoir Fancies.

Delightfully dainty and cool looking are the new tamboured Swiss shams and scarfs for the boudoir. The plaid Swiss is shown for pillow shams, bureau dress and table scarfs, all with heavy scalloped edge and with stitched braid design. These suggest simple curtains of plaid muslin or Swiss and cushion box and couch covers of gayly colored cretonne, with perhaps a colonial rag rug or one of matting in summery lightness. The plaid Swiss for the shams and covers are decorated with scallops similar to the plaid effect, but solid dots and figures are strewn over the surface of the braid work.

To Protect the Blouse.

The hardest wear on a waist comes on the sides under the arms. Protect this part of the blouse with a strip of oiled silk and there will be less likelihood of the unsightly holes, which often make an otherwise good waist unwearable. This is a trick of the trade practiced by the most fashionable of New York dressmakers.—Good House-keeping Magazine.

Health & Beauty Hints
Social Forms and Entertainments
By Katherine Morton

Invitations for October weddings are beginning to fly, and so also are letters to beauty specialists. They are mostly from engaged girls and bridesmaids, pretty pleas for "balm," or pastes, or advice. Two of the future brides complain of being "worn out" and pale and nervous—that is, two who write to me, and here are patients for that cheapest of medicine and that most rewarding of beauty moves—common sense.

Being engaged is in itself a thrilling experience, trying to the nerves, temper and mere muscles, if the girl does much running around, and if she stays at home, and is entirely occupied with the subject of Jack or John and her own importance, she is apt to get not only pale, but extremely below par in physical fitness. Love is the most consuming emotion of which the human heart is capable, and too much occupation with the subject is far from sensible now when two people expect to join their destinies so soon for all time. Therefore, as a first specific toward the relief of that "tired feeling," and as a cure for indifferent complexions, I would advise the bride-to-be to have more long walks with her "young man" and fewer indoor conferences. Fresh air is the skin's greatest reviver and the exercise freshens the blood, tones up muscles and brings joy to the heart; but since young people always want to drink cold things summer afternoons and nights, I must warn the bride who wants a flawless complexion on her wedding day to steer clear of the ice cream sodas taken so often during the rambles with the beloved one and with girl friends.

Buttermilk, as I have said many times, used internally and externally, is very beautifying to the skin, and sometimes an entire buttermilk diet is needed for toning up the stomach after purging or a bilious attack. Molasses of the thick, dark kind is considered to have a distinct beauty value when eaten with coarse bread, and so are the fresh fruits, particularly oranges, grapefruit, grapes and pineapple. A daily salad of fresh green stuff aids the digestion, and so is a help in the banishing of pimples and the sallowness due to coarse eating or neglect of the bowels.

Weddings coming in October entail a good deal more anxiety about the whiteness of the skin than do those of the springtime, for vacations have just ended and many girls return to town disfigured by the alarming point with sunburn and freckles. For the dispersal of these blights massage is needed, but it must follow a hot face bath or a good face steam and be done with a bleaching cream. The cream containing cucumber, lettuce or iris are all whitening in their effect, but much of the success with their use comes with the massage. The rubbing gets down to the seat of things, the pores opening and allowing the unguent used to penetrate below the first layer of skin.

A cucumber milk, which is almost a specific for redness, roughness and sunburn, and which is very helpful in the banishment of freckles, is made in this manner:

Oil of sweet almonds..... 4 ounces
Fresh cucumber juice..... 10 ounces
Essence of cucumbers..... 3 ounces
White castile soap, powdered..... 3/4 ounce
Tincture of Benzoin..... 2-3 dram

The cucumber juice is obtained by boiling the vegetables in a very little water. Slice them thin, skin and all, and let them cook slowly till soft and mushy; strain twice through cloth. The essence is made by putting an ounce and a half of the cucumber juice into the same quantity of high-proof alcohol. Put the essence and the soap in quite a large bottle, as the mixture requires much shaking. After a few hours the soap will be dissolved, when it is time to add the cucumber juice; shake the bottle till these ingredients are thoroughly mixed; then pour out into a crockery bowl and add the oil and benzoin, stirring constantly until there is a creamy liquid. Put the emulsion into small bottles, cork tightly and keep in the dark. Always shake the bottle before using the emulsion.

This milk can be employed instead of the cream for the massage and at the same time it will act as an excellent cleanser.

Comfortable Style.

The transparent gumpie with long sleeves furnishes a very comfortable way out of wearing long gloves with the short sleeved frock of silk or heavy linen.

Most often, perhaps, it is in chiffon or net or other sheer stuff echoing the color of the frock, but one sees it, too, in sheer white or cream lingerie material associated with a jumper blouse of darker coloring.

Polish Tan Shoes Before Wearing.

A dealer told me to always polish tan shoes before they were worn. It is almost impossible to remove spots from them, unless they are polished before they are worn, thus filling up the pores of the leather.—McCall's Magazine.

From a Young Girl.

I have been reading your column quite awhile and now I come to you for help. I am a girl fifteen years old, and would like you to tell me how should I treat a boy who likes me much, and I don't care anything for him.

Is it proper for a girl to kiss a young boy that is older than she, after he has been off for three years? Do you think I write well.—From an Interested Reader.

You have a difficult task, but if the boy has any sense at all, after you have declined his invitations several times he will see that you do not care for his attention. I do not think you need kiss the young man even if he has been absent a long time. He is not a relative, and has no reason to claim kisses. Your writing may be greatly improved by careful practice; it is not good for one of your age.

Written Wedding Invitations.

In writing a wedding invitation to the few guests who are to witness a ceremony to be performed at home, is the same form observed as those engraved, or are informal notes sent?—Perplexed.

Do not try to copy the formal style, but write an individual note to each guest. One of the prettiest home weddings I know of was where the bride wrote little missives something like this: "Dick and I are to be married on Saturday at noon, and it will add greatly to our happiness if you witness the ceremony. Hoping to have you with us, cordially yours, etc."

The Proper Thing to Do.

This may seem a most trivial and even foolish state of mind to be in, but I believe you will be kind enough to aid me. For many long years I was barred from all social pleasures by a series of illnesses. Now that I am well and can again enter society, I find I am too self-conscious to enjoy a single moment. I do not know what to say or how to act. What shall I do? Can you give me any set phrases to learn or repeat on all occasions? Anything you suggest I will be grateful for.—Will.

In the first place, endeavor to forget yourself. This will only be accomplished by degrees, for you have been so accustomed to thinking of yourself and your surroundings. If possible, become engaged in some active work for others. When you enter a room do not let the thought come, "what do they think of me," but "what can I see or do or say to make the other 'fellow' comfortable and happy?" You will find this habit will grow, too, and you will soon be perfectly at ease.

Reply to "Mary."

Your questions do not belong in our department, so I cannot take space to reply. Sorry.

The Proper Calling Cards.

Please inform me which is the proper way for a wife to have her calling cards printed. Should the husband's initials be used, his full Christian name (if a long one), or the wife's Christian name? Should the name be printed or written?—Nell.

A visiting card should bear the husband's full name or his first name and middle initial, and they should be written if you cannot afford to have them engraved, not printed.

From a Fall Hostess.

I want to give a party in the fall, and want to invite some boys and girls from the country. As it will not be a house party, do I have to invite them to stay with me—especially the boys. Hoping to see this in print at your very earliest convenience.—An Interested Reader.

It is not necessary for you to ask the boys to be house guests; they should look out for themselves at a hotel. Of course, girls could not go to a public place unchaperoned.

MADAME MERRI.

New Material.

A new material that is being used for suits and gowns and even for handsome coats is of cotton texture, but has such a beautiful chamois finish that it places the fabric among those of more aristocratic fiber. The cloth comes in blue, lavender, tan, brown and biscuit color, and because it will wash instead of requiring a dry cleaner is most practical as well as slightly.

Dry Shampoo.

Most women are familiar with the dry shampoo done with talcum powder rubbed into the scalp. Hair brushes may also be cleaned this way. Dry cleaning brushes may be done either with talcum powder or with flour. Rub the powder thoroughly into the bristles and then shake it out. The brush will be clean and stiff.

LATEST TEA GOWN IDEAS

The illustration on the left shows a dainty gown of cloud gray delaine and has an effective trimming caused by a yoke and sleeve strap of fancy delaine, pale pink or blue would be pretty; this has the lower part set to it with slight fullness; narrow lace or fancy braid edges the trimming; a gray silk cord girdle draws the gown in at waist.

Materials required: Five yards delaine 40 inches wide, three yards 28 inches wide, two and a half yards edging.

The second is a handsome style suitable for satin, face cloth, or cashmere; it is a loose, elegant gown and has a large collar composed of a piece of lightly embroidered material edged with a band of satin to which a silk fringe is attached; the cuffs are made to match.

Materials required: Five and one-half yards 44 inches wide, two yards fringe three-quarters yards satin 20 inches wide.

BLACK VELVET WIDELY USED RED SHADE NOW IN FAVOR

Shade and Material Both Are Employed in Costumes That Have "Official" Sanction.

Extreme of Fashion, but the Ensemble Is Not Always of the Best.

The "sweet unreasonableness" of which the poet sings is exemplified by the French modiste who invariably emphasizes tulle and lace and all filmy fabrics for winter and then introduces velvet, and sometimes fur, on the summer costume. Fashion's vagaries are inconsistent but beautiful, so why object?

Black velvet is one of the prime favorites today. It is used for all types of sashes and girdles, affording contrast and giving a slender appearance at the waist line. It is practical on account of its defiance of dust and hard wear, and its ability to harmonize with all colors is too great to ignore. Therefore the black velvet has an excuse other than beauty for being.

Most noticeable is the use of black velvet as facings for hats. The newest models now show entire undersurfaces of black velvet, or wide bands on wire applied with perfect smoothness to the edge of the brim.

In this manner the bright color of a hat can be toned down and dissociated, so to speak, from the gown. The black also brings out the brightness of the eyes, the whiteness of the skin, and is generally becoming.

The Sailor Blouse.

The middie blouse is enjoyed by the younger generation. The yoke idea is repeated on many of the smart models for the athletically bound woman. The enlarged armhole is another feature, more of the last season than the future, to be sure, which has aided in making a shirt intended for strenuous arm motion comfortable. Although the high mannish linen stiff collar with the jaunty little four-in-hand tie is very trig, it is not nearly as comfortable as the soft turned-down collar finished with a soft silk cravat. Patch pockets should be just as plentiful as possible.

Ropes of Pearl and Jet.

Ropes of pearls are sometimes three yards long and when these break by catching in the handle of a sunshade or by some other accident it is not always easy to recover all of them, and in the case of real pearls a single lost one may represent a large sum of money. That may be one reason that the chains are now in less costly materials. Jet is immensely in favor for this purpose, and jet ornaments are coming in as a consequence of the craze for a touch of black in all the newest gowns.

Narrow Pleated Skirts.

According to the Dry Goods Economist, the fall lines of dresses include many models made in some form of pleated skirt. In every instance, however, they are straight and narrow. The pleats extend to the waist in some of the samples, but other styles show pleated panels or deep pleated flounces. When the pleats extend only to the knees a modified panier drapery finishes the upper skirt section.

Polo Blouses.

No discussion of cool clothes for hot weather is complete without a reference to those admirable shirtwaists made of white silk which are called polo blouses. They are another addition to the mannish garments which women have garnered into their wardrobes.

DAINTY HAT

The brim of this hat is of pale blue Tagel, the crown of fine lace over pale blue silk; it is drawn up into a puff and set to the brim under satin ribbon, which is arranged in a bow in front.

Under the Brim.

Have you noticed the hat trimmings' new position? Look under the brim if you would find it.

Roses, tiny bunches of field flowers, flat bows of velvet ribbon, plumes and aligrettes are now decorating the hat underneath the wide brim. And it is delightfully becoming.

Paul Poiret introduced the large flat hat with the underbrim trimmed as suggested. Other milliners took up the becoming style and the feature is firmly established in the millinery realm.

Black as Decoration.

The present craze for black and white has got into the house, and black sofa cushions, and table covers, elaborately embroidered, of course, are now reported. The pin cushion may be black, in a white bedroom, and a footstool with delicate embroidery of a contrasting color, will also add to the effectiveness of the room. Black satin is the best for this purpose.

Aluminum Thread Bags.

Bags and purses are being crocheted of a new aluminum thread that looks like silver and that is said not to tarnish. The thread is used with cut steel beads or without the beads and costs 40 cents a spool. The bags that are mixed with the beads are particularly handsome.

CHAPTER XV.

A Confession.

Of late Berny had not been sleeping well and the fear that this would react upon her looks had spurred her to the unwonted exertion of walking. The route she had chosen was one of those thoroughfares which radiate from Market Street, and though not yet slums, are far removed from the calm, wide gentility of the city's more dignified highways. With all her cleverness, she had never shaken off the tastes and instincts of the class she had come from.

Walking loiteringly forward, she crossed Powell Street, and approached the entrance of that home of vaudeville, the Granada Theater. There had been a recent change of bill, and as she drew near she looked over the posters standing by the entrance on which the program for the coming week was printed in large letters. Midway down one of these, her eye was caught by a name and she paused and stood reading the words:

"JAMES DEFAFY BUFORD
The Witty, Brilliant and Incomparable Monologist
In His Unrivaled Monologue
Entitled
KLONDIKE MEMORIES."

She remembered at once that this was the actor Dominick had spoken of as having been snowed in with them at Antelope. Dominick had evidently not expected he would come to San Francisco. He had said the man had been going to act in Sacramento.

As she walked down the street she saw that she was approaching the car line which passed close to her old home. A clock in a window showed her it was nearly five. Hannah would have been home for some time, and Hazel might be expected within an hour. Without more thought she hailed an up-town car.

She found them both at home, Hazel having been allowed to leave her work an hour earlier than usual. Sitting in a small room in the back of the house, they were surrounded by the outward signs of dressmaking. Yards of material lay over the chairs, and on a small wooden table, which fitted close to her body and upon which portions of the material lay neatly smoothed out, Hannah was cutting with a large pair of shears.

It Was Buford, but a Rejuvenated and Prosperous Buford.

If Berny wanted to surprise her sisters, she certainly now had the satisfaction of realizing her hopes. For a moment after she told her news they stared at her, too amazed to speak, even Hannah, who had scented difficulties, being completely unprepared after the way of human nature—for the particular difficulty that had cropped up. It was Hazel who first spoke.

"Buy you off to leave Dominick? Give you money to go away from him, do you mean?"

"That's what I said," returned her sister with dry grimace. "She's made me two offers to leave my husband, wants me to get out and, after I've gone for a year, ask him to bring suit for desertion."

"My Lord!" murmured Hannah in a hushed voice of horror.

"How much did she offer you?" said Hazel.

"That was a crucial question. Berny knew its importance and sat up, pushing back her disarranged hair. "One hundred thousand dollars," she said calmly.

"A hundred thousand dollars!" Hannah echoed, each word pronounced with a slow, aghast unbelief. "Oh, it can't be that much!"

"It's that much now," said Berny, her calmness accentuated to the point of nonchalance, "and if I want I can make them double it, raise it to a quarter of a million. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars isn't so much when you've got millions in trunks. What's that to the Ryans?"

She rose abruptly from her seat, pushing it back and feeling that she had better go before she said too much.

As she rose, Hazel rose too, her face full of suspicious concern.

"It's not another woman, is it, Berny?" she almost whispered.

Berny had told so many lies that she did not bother about a few more. Moreover, she was determined not to let her sisters know about Rose Cannon—not yet, anyway.

"No," she said with short scorn, turning to pick up her feather boa. "Of course it's not. He's not that kind of a man. He's too much of a sissy. Another woman! I'd like to tell him that."

When she reached home, she found on the hall table a note which the Chinaman told her had been left by a messenger. It was from Bill Cannon and contained but a few lines. These, of a businesslike brevity, expressed the writer's desire to see her again, and politely suggested that, if she could come to his office on any one of the three specified afternoons, between the hours of two and four, he would be deeply honored and obliged.

In his "Klondike Monologue" at the Orpheum, Buford, the actor, made a sudden and unexpected hit. The morning after his first appearance, both Dominick and Berny read in the paper eulogistic notices of the new star. Dominick was particularly interested. He remembered Buford's state of worry while at Antelope and was glad to see that the unlucky player was, in the parlance of his own world, "making good."

Now, from what he heard, Buford's hard times should be at an end. Such a hit as he had made should give him the required impetus. Men Dominick knew, who had theatrical affiliations, told him that Buford was "made." The actor could now command a good salary on any of the vaudeville circuits in the country, and if "he had it in him" he might ascend the ladder toward the heights of legitimate comedy. His humorous talent was unique and brilliant. It was odd, considering his age, that it had not been discovered sooner.

Berny was very anxious to see him. Hazel and Josh had seen him on one of the first evenings and pronounced him "simply great." She extorted a promise from Dominick that, at the earliest opportunity, he would buy tickets for her, and, if he could not accompany her himself, she could go with one of her sisters.

He stopped to buy the tickets one midday on his way to lunch. He made up his mind to buy three, then Berny could either take her two sisters, or Hazel and Josh, whose craving for the theater was an unassuageable passion. He was turning from the ticket office window when a sonorous voice at his elbow arrested him:

"Mr. Ryan," it boomed out, "do I see you at last?"

It was Buford, but a rejuvenated and prosperous Buford, the reflection of his good fortune shining from his beaming face and fashionable figure. The red rasped look had left his features and the hollows beneath his high cheek-bones were filled out.

"Glad to see you, Buford," he said, "and glad to hear you've made such a success of it."

Buford acknowledged these compliments with cool, acquiescent complacency.

"I have struck my gait," he said, nodding his head in condescending acceptance. "I have at last won my spurs. The ways of fate—or let me say Providence—are truly inscrutable. I turned my face to the North in a bitter hour, and it was in a bitter hour that I adopted the stage."

"Then you went on the stage up there? You've only been on a few years?"

"Nearly four," said the actor. He looked down at his shoe for a moment as if considering, and repeated without looking up, "It will be four next September. Trouble drove me to those far distant lands and hard luck drove me on the stage. I'd never had anything to do with it till then; I hadn't a stage game about me. There'd even been a time when I had a strong prejudice against the theater and never went to one. But a man must live and—"

He stopped, his attention arrested by a hand laid softly on his sleeve. A youth of Hebraic countenance had issued from a door behind him, and, touching his arm with a hesitating, uncertain finger, began to speak in a low tone.

"Duty calls," said Buford. "I am sorry, but they want me inside. I hope later to be able to place a box at your disposal. Madame, you say, is very desirous of seeing me. Well, I'll see to it that she does so under the most favorable conditions."

He bowed impressively as though saluting Berny in person, and then, with a last dignified farewell to Dominick, turned toward the door which opened at his approach.

CHAPTER XVI.

Rose's Point of View.

The following Sunday, at ten o'clock in the morning, Dominick noiselessly descended the stairs of the flat and let himself out into the street. He would spend the morning walking, anywhere where there was quiet and a view. He would take his lunch at any little joint—country hotel, city chop-house—he happened to pass, and in the afternoon he would walk again.

He ascended the hill by one of the streets on its southern slope, violently steep, the upward leaps of its sidewalk here and there bridged by flights of steps. Every little house was disgorging its inmates, garbed in the light Sunday attire of the Californian on pleasure bent.

Dominick went up the hill in the clear, golden sunlight, and in his revolt he pushed Berny from his mind, and let Rose come in her place. His thoughts, always held from her, sprang at her, enfolded her, seemed to draw her toward him as once his arms had done.

Standing on the summit of the hill, where the wall of the quarry drops down to the water front and the wharves, he relinquished himself to his dream of her.

As if called, he turned sharply and saw Rose standing a few yards away from him, looking at him with an expression of averted indecision.

"I wasn't sure it was you," she said. "And then when I saw it was, I was going to steal away before you saw me. But you turned suddenly as if you heard me."

"I felt you there," he answered. "I walked up here this morning to have a think. I don't know where the think was going to take me when you came round that corner and stopped it. What brought you here?"

"Nothing in particular. It was such a fine morning I thought I'd just ramble about, and I came this way without thinking. My feet brought me without my knowledge."

"Sit down and talk to me," she said quietly. "No one can hear you. It's like being all alone in the world up here on the hilltop. We can sit on this stone."

There was a broken boulder behind them, close to the narrow foot-way, and she sat on it, motioning him to a flat piece of rock beside her.

"Tell me the whole thing," she said. "You and I have never talked much about your affairs. And what concerns you concerns me."

"It's just what you know," he began slowly. "Only as every day goes by it seems to get worse. I've never told you much about my marriage. I've never told anybody."

"I knew all about her when I married her. I was young, but I wasn't a green fool. Only I didn't seem to realize, I didn't guess, I didn't dream, that she was going to stay the way she was."

"Does she want to leave you?"

The question seemed to touch a nerve that startled and then stiffened him. He answered it with his head turned toward her, the eyebrows lifted, a combative note in his voice:

"I don't know whether she does or not." He stopped and then said, with his face flushing, "No, I don't think she does."

"How can you leave her, then?"

"You expect too much of weak human nature," he said.

"No," she answered, "I don't. I only expect what you can do."

He turned and looked at her.

"Then I'm to live for the rest of my life with a wife I don't care for, separated from the woman I love? What is there in that to keep a man's heart alive?"

"The knowledge that we love each other. That's a good deal, I think."

It was the first time she had said in words that she loved him. There was no trace of embarrassment or consciousness on her face; instead she seemed singularly calm and steadfast, much less moved than he. Her words shook him to the soul. He turned his eyes from her face and grasping for her hand, clasped it, and pressed it to his heart, and to his lips, then loosed it and rose to his feet, saying to himself:

"Yes, that's a good deal."

Her eyes followed him, and then brought up on the schooner bearing away on its long tack, strained and careening in the breeze that, down there in the open, blew fresh and strong from the great Pacific.

"It's a schooner," she said absently. "Where do you suppose it's going?"

"I don't know. Somewhere a long way off, I hope. My devils are sailing away on it."

They stood side by side, gazing down at it till she moved away with a sudden "Good-by."

"Good-by," he answered, and stretched out his hand.

Berny had been turning over in her mind the advantages of accepting the money—had been letting herself dwell upon the delights of possible possession—when at the Sunday dinner that afternoon Josh McCrae threw her back into the state of incensed rejection with which she had met the first offer. With his face wreathed in joyous grins, he had apprised her of the fact that only an hour earlier, while walking on Telegraph Hill, he had seen Dominick there talking with Miss Cannon.

She was quiet for the rest of the afternoon, but it was not till she had reached her own home, silent in its untenanted desertion, that she had an opportunity to turn the full vigor of her mind on what she had heard.

She put from her mind all intention of ever taking the money. She wanted it desperately, terribly.

She knew that the interview for which Bill Cannon had asked was for a last, deciding conversation. He was to make his final offer. It was a moment of torture to her when she wondered what it would be, and her mind hovered in distracted temptation over the certain two hundred thousand dollars and the possible quarter of a million.

She was in this state of feverish distraction when she went to Bill Cannon's office.

Nothing could be more disarmingly friendly than the old man's greeting.

"What I asked you to come here for to-day was to talk about this matter, to talk further, to thresh it out some more. I've seen Mrs. Ryan since our last meeting. She doubles her offer to you. She'll give you two hundred thousand dollars to leave her son."

"Well, I won't," said Berny, drawing herself to the edge of the chair. "She can keep her two hundred thousand dollars."

"Don't be in such a hurry; I've not finished yet. This is just between you and me," he went on slowly, his voice lowered, dropped to the key of confidences. "I'll give you another hundred thousand. I'll put it with Mrs. Ryan's pile, and it'll run your fortune up well past a quarter of a million."

"You think that I don't know why you're offering me this money. Well, old man, I do. You want to get my husband for your own daughter, Rose Cannon."

It was Cannon's turn to be speechless. He had not for years received so unexpected and violent a blow. He sat in the same attitude, not moving or uttering a sound, and looking at Berny with a pair of eyes that each second grew colder and more steely.

"Come," he said with sudden authority. "I can't waste my time this way. Are you going to take the money or not?"

His manner, as if by magic, had changed. Every suggestion of deference or consideration had gone from it.

"Will you take the money?"

"No," she said loudly. "Don't ask me that again!"

"All right," he answered quietly, "that ends our business. Do you know your way out, or shall I ring for Granger to see you to the door?"

It was late, almost dark, that evening when Cannon left his office. As he walked down Montgomery Street to the car, he pondered on Berny, wondering and with a sort of begrudging, astonished admiration of a courage that he could not but admire.

How she had found out about Rose he could not imagine, only it was very enraging that she should have done so. It was the last, and most detestable fact in the whole disagreeable business.

It was the first of May. By the morning's mail he had received a letter from Gene announcing, with the playful blitheness which marked all the young man's allusions to the transfer of the Santa Trinidad ranch, that the year of probation was up and he would shortly arrive in San Francisco to claim his own.

Gene's father had read this missive in grim-visaged silence. The sense of self-approval that he might have experienced was not his; he only felt that he had been "done." Two months before, thinking that the ranch was slipping too easily from his grasp, that he was making too little effort to retain his own, he had hired a detective to go to San Luis Obispo and watch the career of Gene. Signs of his old waywardness. On the thirtieth of April the man had reported that Gene's course had been marked by an abstinence as genuine and complete as the most exacting father could wish.

His mood was unusually black when he entered the house. The servant, who came forward to help him off with his coat, knew it the moment he saw the heavy, scowling face. The piece of intelligence the man had to convey—that Mr. Gene Cannon had arrived half an hour earlier from San Luis Obispo—was not calculated to abate the Bonanza King's irritation. Gene, however, was not at all abashed by any lack of cordiality. At the best of times, he was not a sensitive person, and as this had been his portion since his early manhood, he was now used to it. Moreover, tonight he was in high spirits. In his year of exile he had learned to love the outdoor life for which he was fitted, and had conceived a passionate desire to own the splendid tract of land for which he felt the love and pride of a proprietor.

"Then I'm to Live for the Rest of My Life With a Wife I Don't Care for."

Always a loquacious person, a stream of talk flowed from him to which the old man offered no interruption, and in which even Rose found it difficult to insert an occasional, arresting question. Gene had a number of new plans.

The old man listened without speaking, his chin on his collar, his eyes fixed in a wide, dull stare on his happy boy. At intervals—Gene almost clamoring for a response—he emitted one of those inarticulate sounds with which it was his custom to greet information that he did not like or the exact purport of which he did not fathom.

The only thing which would have sweetened his mood would have been a conversation, peaceful and uninterrupted, with his daughter. He had not seen as much of her as usual during the last few days, as she had been confined to her room with a cold. This was the first evening she had been at dinner for four days, and the old man had looked forward to one of their slow, enjoyable meals together, with a long, comfortable chat over the black coffee, as was their wont.

When dinner was over, and she rose from her seat, he asked her to play on the piano in the sitting-room near by.

Neither of the men spoke for a space while the music crept in softly from the sitting room. The old man gazed for a while maliciously at his son.

"Well, you've got it!" said the father at last, in a loud, pugnacious tone. "You've got it, haven't you?"

"Well, I guess I have," said Gene, his triumph tempered by an air of modesty, "and I guess I earned it fair. I stuck to the bargain and there were times when I can tell you it was a struggle. I never once slipped up. If you don't believe my word, I can bring you men from down there that know me well, and they'll testify that I speak the truth."

"It was Rose who really put me up to it," he went on. "She'd say to me I could do it, I only had to try; any one could do anything they really made their minds up to. If you said you couldn't do a thing, why, then you couldn't, but if you said you could, you got your mind into that attitude, and it wasn't hard any more. And she was right. When I got my mind round to looking at it that way, it came quite easily. Rose's always right."

"Then, why the hell," said the old man, "do you go on talking about yourself and your damned concerns, bothering the life out of her when she's got troubles of her own?"

"Troubles of her own? What troubles has she got?"

"She's got a cold," said Cannon.

He spoke sharply and looked at Gene with a sidelong eye full of observant malice. The young man gazed back at him, confused, for a moment half inclined to laugh, thinking his father, in a sudden unaccustomed playfulness, was joking with him.

"Well, if it's only a cold," he stammered, "it's nothing to tear up the ground about. I thought it was something serious, that Rose was unhappy about something. But a cold—"

After all, it was a good thing the boy did not know; he was of the kind who could not be trusted with any information of importance. He did not want Gene or anybody else to interfere. He, Rose's father, and he alone, without any outside assistance, would reach up and pick out for her any star that sparkled in the heavens, any moon for which she might choose to cry. She wanted Dominick Ryan for her husband. She should have him and it would be her father who would get him for her.

FACTORY GIRL GIVES UP

Too Sick to Work—Doctor Advised Operation. Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—"I run a sewing machine in a large factory and got all run down. I had to give up work for I could not stand the pains in my back. The doctor said I needed an operation for female trouble but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me more than the doctors did. I hope that every one who is suffering will get the Compound. My pains, nervousness and backache are gone and I have gained five pounds. I owe my thanks to your medicine for it is the working girls friend, and all women who suffer should write to you for special advice."—Miss TILLIE PLENZIG, 3 Jay St., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

When a remedy has lived for over thirty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their very lives to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

We challenge anyone to show any other one remedy for a special class of disease which has attained such an enormous demand and maintained it for so many years as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

RED CROSS CRUSADERS GIVE MUSICAL TREAT

Crothersville Organization Decides to Repeat the Program at Henryville August 22.

The musicale at the Crothersville Presbyterian church Saturday night, given by the Red Cross Crusaders and others, was a treat to the large audience that gathered by 8 o'clock. The programs were distributed by the Crusaders wearing the beautiful emblem on the left arm.

Besides the large choir, those having special vocal, instrumental and humorous parts on the program were Misses Marguerite Patrick, Lillie Kutz, Pearl Applegate, Bertha Blau, Lucy Ritz, Emojean Densford, Mollie Dismore, Cora Stewart, Mrs. Goldie Card, Mrs. James Ritz, Mrs. F. A. Garriott, Mrs. Harve Rider and the M. Gilead quartette. The selections of the quartette were much appreciated; and several songs on the program will be repeated at the Henryville Scout entertainment, August 22nd.

A conference of the Crusaders was called at the close of the musicale and a beautiful silk banner bearing the Red Cross and the White Rose was decided upon and will be ready for those who go to Henryville with the Scouts Thursday.

It was further decided to make the Crusaders in the truest sense a community movement and to enroll in the organization as active or associate members all those who will stand for the Red Cross ideals of social service and citizenship, with something definite that each one, old and young, may do for the betterment of the town or community in which they live. There is a great national purpose in the Scout and Crusader work. It will take some time to perfect such an organization in each community, but the assistance of the National Red Cross Society itself and some of the leading social workers in Indiana will be sought in the local organization at Crothersville and Brownstown.

It will be of interest to note that the Crusaders in Brownstown had a delightful social at the home of Mrs. Sarah Findley, their leader, a week ago, and as a result of the Scout and Crusader work in Brownstown Dr. Cummings and Prof. Payne have secured the services of Dr. W. F. King, Assistant Secretary of the State Board of Health, to give an illustrated lecture in Brownstown Tuesday night, August 27th at the Teachers' Institute. It is hoped that this same lecture may be secured for Crothersville in the near future.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. and Mrs. William Matlock were called to Medora this morning on account of the serious illness of their grandchild, an infant daughter of Dr. Hughes Matlock.

The special feature at the Majestic this week is the comedy act, in which there is considerable good singing. The "black face" is especially good and received several good encores last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Liebrandt arrived here Monday evening to attend the funeral of their son-in-law, Harry Gosney. The message was not delivered until Sunday and made them arrive here too late for the funeral.

regarding the authenticity of the paper.

Chief of Police Abell was also standing near the corner and when Mr. Lewis pronounced the check fraudulent, Chief Abell was informed and started out to find the forger. Evidently the stranger was watching the movements of the officer for he disappeared after he left the meat shop and was not seen by anyone after that time. A search for the man was kept up during the evening but no trace of him could be found.

The forgeries were committed by one man according to the description given by the merchants who saw him. He was described as being of medium height probably weighing about 150 pounds. He wore a soft blue shirt and straw hat, and part of the time during the evening was without his coat.

It is believed that the man was a professional in this line of work and may be connected with the party who was guilty of passing forged checks to the amount of $4,000 at Frankfort, on Friday evening.

Thought for Women.

When New York State forbade the sale of egret plumes the dealers in this horrible product went to Jersey. When Jersey joined New York they went to Philadelphia, where they are now carrying on a mail order business with women who think themselves beautiful by carrying on their heads a souvenir of a mother bird killed and her fledglings left to starve.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

Mount Sinai Located.

The discovery of what is believed to be the real Mt. Sinai of Holy Script is reported to the Academy of Science at Berlin by Prof. Dr. Al Musil from Damascus. Prof. Musil believes that the extinct volcano, Hala-Bedr, in the Hedja region of northern Arabia, is the biblical mountain where the Ten Commandments were given to Moses.

Evenly Answered.

"Oh, Mr. Smith," she said, "last night I had such a delightful dream! I positively dreamt that you and I—only you and I, mind—were traveling on our honeymoon. Do you ever have dreams like that, Mr. Smith?" "I am afraid I used to, Mrs. Antique," he answered, "but now I am more careful over my suppers."

Mothers' Day in Neighborhood.

A woman in Maryland contributes the following to the Woman's Home Companion Department of Practical Household News: "Four mothers in a little town have one day in a week that they call 'Mothers' day.' One of them keeps her own and the children of the other three all day, while the other mothers go shopping or visiting, or rest."

Good Excuse.

Ethel has taken a great dislike to rice, and lately her mother has not offered it to her. The other morning she asked what Ethel would like for breakfast. "Oh, give me some rice, so as I can fuss about it," was her reply.

Being Practical.

Practical people are wise people. Genius may create brilliant ideas, and be of a very active turn of mind, but money makes the mare go, and what practical people really wish is to have a pot, to have that full of potatoes, and to have fire enough to make the pot boil.

Bird's Nest in Human Skull.

A bird has built its nest in a human skull lying in a vault beneath a church at Rothwell, Northamptonshire, England. Apparently the bird entered the vault through the ventilator and after selecting the largest cranium among the rows of skulls on the shelves proceeded to enlarge a hole, which had probably been made originally by a battle-axe.—New York Sun.

Always Business.

"Are you angry because I lost my temper and tried to scratch your eyes out?" asked the repentant prima donna. "No," replied the impresario. "It was a good suggestion. Just remember how you went about it and if grand opera fails maybe we can do something in the moving picture way."

JAS. A. ROBERTSON KILLED IN UTAH BY FALLING TREE

Former Seymour Man Meets With Fatal Accident in Geyser's Pass Near Moab.

James A. Robertson, formerly of this city, was killed last Tuesday in Geyser's pass, near Moab, Utah, where he lived for several years. He was engaged in cutting timber when the accident occurred.

A Moab paper gives the following account of the accident:

James A. Robertson, a popular and greatly respected citizen of Moab, was instantly killed in Geyser's pass Tuesday morning, when a tree, which was being cut down several feet from the place he was working, fell in the wrong direction, striking him on the head before he had time to jump out of the way.

Mr. Robertson, Roy Tidwell and a Mexican were at work cutting down trees for a fence. Mr. Tidwell was some distance away from the others. When he saw the tree, which the Mexican was cutting down, start to fall towards Mr. Robertson, he shouted a warning. Looking up instantly, but evidently blinded by the sun and unable to see the danger of his position, Mr. Robertson did not attempt to get out of the way, and the falling tree struck him on the head, terribly crushing his skull and killing him instantly.

Assistance was immediately secured and the body of Mr. Robertson was placed in a wagon and brought to Moab. In the meantime the sad news had been conveyed to relatives in Moab by means of the telephone, and a rig was immediately dispatched to the mountains. The two rigs reached town with the body about twelve o'clock Tuesday night.

James Albert Robertson was born at Seymour, Jackson county, Indiana, March 25, 1875. At the age of 15 he went to Kansas and ten years later he moved to Washburn, Barry county, Missouri. There he married Miss Caddie Raines. About twelve years ago he came to Utah with his family. He lived here for four years and then moved to Emmett, Idaho, where he resided for six years. Two years ago he returned to Moab.

He is survived by his wife, and Ola, aged 12, Maurice, aged 6, Loren, aged 4, and James Curtis, aged 1, his children; A. M. Robertson and C. A. Robertson, brothers and Mrs. H. S. Rutledge, a sister.

CARNIVAL COMPANY AGREE TO TERMS OF COMMITTEE

Amusement Company Will Give Performances at Brownstown as Was First Planned.

The difficulty between the Brownstown Home Coming entertainment committee and the carnival company was satisfactorily settled Monday night, the manager of the carnival having consented to the terms of the committee. The controversy arose over the position of several refreshment stands, privileges having been sold to several Brownstown people along the principal streets. The carnival people objected to this arrangement and believed that they should have the entire street upon which the shows were given.

Monday afternoon the manager stated that he would come to Seymour for the week rather than remain in Brownstown under those conditions, but after he reconsidered the matter he finally decided to remain as first agreed. The tents and other equipment were unloaded this morning and the workmen are getting everything in readiness for the Home Coming which will open Wednesday. A large number of visitors are already at Brownstown and many more will arrive before the close of the week.

The people who had laid in supplies of candy, pop corn, ice cream and soft drinks, were somewhat alarmed when the carnival company announced that it would not remain, as it was believed that without an amusement company the Home Coming would have to be postponed. The committee reported this morning that all arrangements had been completed and that the big event would be held as first planned.

Many Joining Club.

The membership of the Jackson Motor Club is increasing daily, and the number of members now reaches about fifty. A large number of automobile owners and others who are interested in better roads who live in the county are interested in the move and have agreed to become members of the new organization. The organization committee is working on the bylaws and as soon as they are completed a special meeting will be called and submitted for the consideration of the members.

Weather Indications.

Cloudy and slightly cooler in north. Probably showers south portion tonight. Wednesday fair.

Will Visit the South.

Bruce York, who has charge of the local office of Barney & Hines, will accompany a number of local men to Louisiana this afternoon where they will investigate the lands which that company has for sale. Among those who will make the trip are Louis Miller, Fred Miller, J. T. Jones, William Taulman, Frank Spera, Amos Rhodes, J. E. Bridges, Frank Grein and Matthew Heagle. A party composed of Ed Stanfield, Mort Coryell, Perry Taulman and George Nicholson recently returned from the south and purchased land from the company. The firm expects to locate fifty families in Louisiana within the next two months. They also have an office at Memphis.

Shipping Melons.

A number of express and interurban cars are loaded here each day with cantaloupes and water melons for the city markets. The cantaloupe crop is unusually large and the quality of melons is very fine. Local retailers declare that some of the largest and finest melons are being marketed which have been brought to the city for several years. Many of the growers have an abundance of melons which are too ripe to ship and these are being sold here and at Columbus. Each evening loads of such melons are brought to the city.
